Red Flag or Overthinking?

A 5-MINUTE CLARITY CHECK
FOR WHEN SOMETHING FEELS OFF

BY STEPHANIE LASTELLA

THE DATE PROFILER™

BEFORE YOU START

Something felt off. That's why you're here.

Not a fight. Not a blowup. Just a low hum of something's not right that you can't quite explain.

You've been replaying the conversation. Giving him the benefit of the doubt. Wondering if you're being too sensitive, too suspicious, too much.

> You're not.

This isn't a checklist to prove he's a bad person. It's a way to stop arguing with yourself long enough to see what's actually there.

How to Use This

Read each question. Answer based on what he does — not what he says, not what he meant, not what you hope is true.

Don't soften your answers to be fair. You're not on trial here. You're just looking.

Note which column you choose most — first, second, or third option. Your results are on the last page.

1

QUESTION 1 OF 7

Do his words and his actions match — without you having to explain it to yourself?

- Yes — what he says lines up with what he does
- Sometimes, but I usually fill in the gaps for him
- No — I do a lot of interpreting

Healthy interest doesn't need translation.

2

QUESTION 2 OF 7

When you bring up something that bothered you, what happens?

- He listens and asks questions
- He brushes it off or makes it a joke
- It somehow becomes about him

Watch for explanations that reroute responsibility instead of addressing what you said.

3

QUESTION 3 OF 7

After spending time with him — or just talking to him — how do you feel?

- Settled
- Unsure — I'm replaying things
- Tense, self-critical, a little on edge

Your body keeps score before your brain catches up.

4

QUESTION 4 OF 7

Has trust built on its own, or has he asked for it?

- It's grown naturally over time
- He talks about trust a lot
- I feel pressured to just trust him

Trust isn't something you give on request. It accumulates. Or it doesn't.

5

QUESTION 5 OF 7

When something doesn't add up, do you feel okay slowing down — or do you feel like you can't?

- I feel allowed to pause
- I worry about losing him if I do
- Slowing down feels like a risk

Urgency is a tactic. Connection doesn't require speed.

6

QUESTION 6 OF 7

Are you figuring out if he's right for you — or are you working to make sure he stays interested?

- I'm assessing fit
- I try not to rock the boat
- I'm managing his reactions

If you're performing, you're not choosing.

7

QUESTION 7 OF 7

If nothing changed from this point forward, would you be okay with that?

- Yes — relieved, actually
- Neutral
- No — disappointed, still hoping

Hope isn't data.

YOUR RESULTS

What Your Answers Mean

ADD UP WHICH COLUMN YOU CHOSE MOST OFTEN

MOSTLY FIRST OPTIONS

Trust is forming at a reasonable pace. Stay observant without becoming vigilant. What you're seeing is data — keep collecting it.

A MIX OF FIRST AND SECOND

Slow down. Don't add emotional investment yet. You need more time and more information before you decide what this is.

SEVERAL THIRD OPTIONS

This isn't overthinking. This is your pattern recognition working exactly the way it should. Something is asking for your attention.

Nothing here says run. But something says pause — and that's worth listening to.

WANT THE FULL PICTURE?

The Date Profiler Field Manual

This clarity check is a starting point. The Field Manual goes further — so you can stop second-guessing and start choosing with real confidence.

- How to verify before you trust — without playing detective
- Which early patterns actually matter vs. normal dating nerves
- How to stop second-guessing your own read on someone
- How to stay in the dating world without losing yourself to it

Get the Field Manual →

Just $17 · Instant Download

It's not about finding fault. It's about protecting your time before it's already spent.

© 2026 The Date Profiler · @thedateprofiler · thedateprofiler.com
This guide is for self-reflection purposes only.